

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

When Parents Breakup Moms Get Custody, Child support & Control & Dads Just Get “Out”.

It doesn't matter how much money you have, look at Kim Basinger & Alec Baldwin or Charlie Sheen & Denise Richards or Michael & Juanita Jordan. This is happening in different cultures, income levels and races. What is happening? Paternal rights are being severely limited.

Women are normally favored in custody hearings and they have control over the kids' interactions with their fathers. Yes, there are visitation orders in place but many women don't honor them. Fathers don't like being an outsider in their own child's life, words are exchanged and then the war over the kids begins.

You're probably thinking that this is about an angry dad; in fact this is not a man's point of view at all. Kim is a woman and a mom. She has two teenage children. Kim is currently married to her high school sweetheart. (“We left each other and married other folks before we eventually got back together.”)

Her first marriage ended in divorce and her kids are a product of that relationship. “We had a turbulent marriage because of his R.A.P.” R.A.P. is a “Kim-ism”. “Kim-isms” are acronyms or phrases that she makes up to explain her spin on things. R.A.P. stands for readily available partners. Obviously Kim was not looking for that sort of marriage so after she found out about the “third” affair she decided it was best that they went their separate ways. Her children were young then about 6 and 4 years old but she knew it was the right thing for her to do.

Since Kim's been where a lot of these women are: physically, emotionally, etc... she believes that she can get through to them. “Kids are not supposed to be used as tools for revenge. Parents are supposed to protect kids from bullies even if the bully turns out to be them.”

She wrote How to Love Your Kids More Than You Hate That Man to help parents and children. “We've got to get these parents to take a look at what they are doing to their kids and to themselves.”
