

Reaching Parents

Kim is trying to reach as many parents as possible so she can change what she sees as a very common problem. The problems discussed in this book can be solved or at the very least we can begin to address them one parent at a time. Sometimes things seem insurmountable but faith and determination can initiate change.

Instead of tossing and turning a child's world, a parent should make it stable.

What's the Point?

There's no need to look far, look inside instead.

The purpose of this book is to stop parents from using kids as a tool to get "back at" ex mates, distinctively moms. It was written from the stand point of motherhood and discusses the way some women have tainted the role of a mom. It discusses why moms have being doing this and their justifications for it. The book is not about blame rather it is about who is suffering and who is paying the cost for all of this animosity and that is the children. It is not anti men or anti woman instead it is pro-children.

This book is about change. This book is about acknowledgment. Moms have a great responsibility and they can no longer ignore the fact that some of them are using their role as mother as a tool to get revenge.

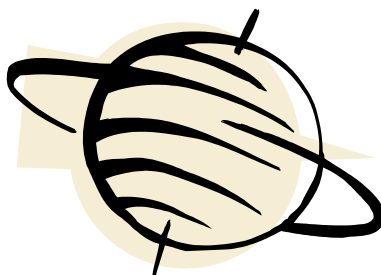

Kim's Story

She's been divorced and is now remarried but she has gone through some of the turmoil that ex couples go through when there are children involved. She has exhibited some keen, concise, insight into the issues that ex mates have since she has lived through it herself. She is a mother who loves her kids and she hopes she can help other mothers release their anger and refocus on their children.

Discussions

Kim would like to participate in your fantastic show to discuss her beliefs regarding these important children's issues. She has listened to your show and she is a big fan. She also knows that you discuss subjects just like these and she would love to be part of these discussions.

She knows that children need help now, just like you have stated previously. She would like to help get them on the right path and the key to that is to reach out to the parents.

If a child's world is out of control then a parent may be to blame. Why keep it spinning?

Let face it parents control and/or affect their kids lives the most, at least initially. Later in life other factors help or "guide" children but early on parents are their moral compass. Together we all can get moms and dads on the only side that counts, their kids side.
